Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions that follow:

It was early spring, and the weather was really nice. Jim's father told him that on Saturday they would go to the forest. Jim was excited. His mother was busy and had to stay at home to take care of his little sister, so she was not able to go with them.

The drive to the forest was only an hour, but to Jim it seemed forever. They finally arrived to the forest. Dad found a good spot close to the lake, put up the tent, set up some chairs and started a small fire. Sitting close by them was a boy about Jim's age. He came over and said his name was Barry and asked Jim if he could play with him. "Sure," said Jim. His dad began talking to Jim's dad about school, work and things dads usually talk about.

The boys explored the rabbit holes. They also enjoyed collecting some leaves for school activities. They prepared their fathers' fishing rods and they watched the forest birds which were beautiful and colourful. Finally, they decided to head for the lake. "Be careful," shouted Barry's father. "We will," Barry shouted back. The boys were having a great time. Suddenly, it became quiet and Jim couldn't find Barry. Jim looked around and finally saw him waving his hands yelling for help. Jim took action and remembered the lifesaving skills he learned during his swimming class at the local pool during the summer. Jim swam to where Barry was and put his arm around him and told him to hold on tight. Just then the forest ranger saw them. He rushed to the water and was able to bring Barry safely back out of the lake. Barry's dad was so scared, but he realised if it hadn't been for Jim's quick action, Barry may have drowned.

Barry and his dad thanked Jim for his fast thinking and great swimming skills. That night they invited Jim and his dad to have a cup of hot chocolate with them. "It's my thank you treat," said Barry's dad. Not only did the boys become friends, but their fathers did as well!

VI- Reading Comprehension (80 Marks)

80

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions that follow:

Western audiences have grown used to the stories of beloved Arabian heroes such as Aladdin. They paint an image of hidden treasures and adventures. But Arab people have a special place in their hearts for a different type of hero: a regular man living his everyday life. This character is Juha, whose funny stories are about him, his family, and his community.

Storytellers would narrate Juha's tales for centuries before he first appeared in a book of stories by Al-Jahiz from the ninth century. Juha's character easily spread throughout the world and was given different names. For example, he is known as Giufà in Italy, and Afanti in China. Other versions of the character also appear in classic Romanian, Turkish, and Iranian stories.

One tale that reveals how quickly he reacts tells of when he was asked to deliver a speech at the mosque. Not being prepared, he asked, "Do you know what I'm going to speak about?" When the people said no, he responded, "I do not wish to speak to people who do not even know what I will talk about."

The next day, they invited him to speak again, and said yes when he asked the same question. He replied, "Since you already know what I'm going to say, I don't have to speak and waste your time." On the third day, the people asked him to speak one more time, as they were prepared for his question. When he asked, half of the crowd answered yes, while the other half said no. He smiled and said, "Fine, let the half who knows explain to the other half who doesn't."

Every Juha story is a mix of wisdom and funny situations. Juha stories have a large variety, from simple stories in the market or at home to long tales about Juha and a king. Although he is neither a hero nor an adventurous sailor, he has been a part of the Arab culture for centuries. No matter what the occasion, Arabs have a Juha story for it.

- Read the following passage, then do as required:

There are a lot of benefits to knowing more than one language. Learning a second language can provide you with more chances of having a good job or advancing in your career. In addition, learning a foreign language can also give you a better understanding of other cultures. You will be more prepared and confident to travel the world and explore other people's ways of living. Did you know that learning a second language can also help you master your own language? For example, learning a new language with similar roots can help you learn other languages as well. Besides, it allows you to train your memory to remember new words.

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

How many things can you see in the night sky? On a clear night you might see the Moon, some planets and thousands of sparkling stars. You can see even more with a telescope. You might see stars where before you only saw dark space. With bigger and bigger telescopes you can see more and more objects in the sky. And you can see those objects in more and more detail.

But scientists believe that there are some things in the sky that we will never see even with the biggest telescope in the world. That is because they are invisible and mysterious. They are dead stars which are called black holes. You might find it hard to imagine that stars die. After all, our Sun is a star. Year after year we see it up in the sky, burning brightly, giving us heat and light. The Sun certainly doesn't seem to be getting old or weak. But stars do burn out and die after billions of years.

As a star's gases burn, they give off light and heat. But when the gas runs out, the star stops burning and begins to die. As the star cools, the outer layers of the star pull in toward the center. The star squashes into a smaller and smaller ball. If the star is very small, it ends up as a cold, dark ball called a black dwarf. If the star is very big, it becomes lesser and lesser until it's packed together tighter than anything else in the universe.

Imagine if the Earth were crushed until it was the size of a tiny marble. That's how tightly this dead star, a black hole, is packed. What pulls the star in toward its center with such power? It's the same force that pulls you down when you jump - the force called gravity. A black hole is so tightly packed that its gravity sucks in everything even light. The light from a black hole can never come back to your eyes. That's why you see nothing but blackness.

So the next time you stare up at the night sky, remember: there's more in the sky than meets the eye!

From a, b, c and d, choose the correct answer: (8x10 = 80 Marks)

- 27- The best title for the passage is:
- a- The Black Holes
 - b- The Burning Sun
 - c- The Force of Gravity

 - b- the layers of a star are pulled outwards when it cools.
 - c- the gravity of the black hole pulls the light inside it.
 - d- the star is giving off heat and light when its gases burn.
- 31- According to paragraph (2), what are black holes?
- a- They are very big stars in size.
 - b- They are invisible dead stars.
 - c- They are stars which give us heat and light.
 - d- They are tiny stars which we can see with a telescope.

- 32- How many things can you see in the night sky?

Read the following passage, then do as required:

Harsh conditions in deserts, especially the lack of water, don't allow many living things from living in these places. However, there are some annual plants, which through their wonderful ways, have managed to survive these difficult conditions. One way is that they usually depend on their extremely short, active life cycles. In events of sudden rain, the plant seeds breed and grow very quickly to make full use of the rainwater. Then, their flowers bloom and set seeds that grow quickly in the hot sun, too. In addition, such plants usually have special means of storing water.

VI- Reading Comprehension (80 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

Katia Krafft was born in 1942 in France. She fell in love with volcanoes when she saw pictures of them. She studied geography at the University of Strasbourg, where she met her husband, Maurice Krafft. He is also a volcano fanatic.

Katia and Maurice started their own volcano center in 1968 and wrote many books that supported their trips all over the world. Katia started her career by taking gas samples of volcanoes. Maurice and Katia would document volcanoes erupting by observing them in person. Volcanoes are unpredictable and dangerous, and many scientists were too afraid to observe eruptions in person, but not Maurice and Katia. Throughout the 1970s and 1980s, they documented the volcanoes. Katia would photograph them while Maurice captured them on video. Katia wore a special helmet to protect her head from falling rocks.

Katia and Maurice's observations have led to a better understanding of volcanic eruptions. They took thickness measurements and gas readings and collected mineral samples just meters away from erupting volcanoes. They documented how these eruptions affected the ecosystems.

Together they witnessed and documented new volcanoes being formed, the effects of acid rain, and dangerous ash clouds. They even went on a small boat into a lake of acid to get proper readings. Their photography and videos allowed them to work with local governments on safety procedures. Some of their last videos were Understanding Volcanic Hazards and Reducing Volcanic Risks, but that did not mean they stopped being risk-takers. They continued to push the limits to get their observations, going closer to the volcano and staying longer during an eruption. In 1991, they were unlucky, and the volcano Mount Unzen in Japan took Katia and Maurice's lives, along with those of 41 other scientists and journalists, when the volcano flow changed direction.

Katia died doing what she loved with her husband. For years, she studied volcanoes right at their edge. Her courage and expertise have given us a greater understanding of volcanoes. The Krafft Medal is now given out to great volcanologists.

From a, b, c and d choose the correct answer: (8 x 10 =80 Marks)

27- The 4th paragraph is mainly about:

- a- where Katia Krafft studied volcanoes.
- b- when the volcano Mount Unzen erupted in Japan.
- c- why volcanoes erupted throughout the world in the past.
- d- how Katia and Maurice documented volcano eruptions.

28- Which best defines the word "fanatic" as mentioned in paragraph 1?

- a- Someone who likes a particular thing or activity very much.
- b- Someone who is fearful that something bad will happen.
- c- Someone who is dangerously or extremely fast.
- d- Someone who is attractively and stylishly fashionable.

29- What does the underlined word " them" in paragraph 2 refer to?

- a- volcanoes
- b- trips
- c- samples
- d- books

30- What can be understood from paragraph 3?

- a- Katia and Maurice's trips all over the world were just for fun.
- b- Katia and Maurice's observations are of great importance.
- c- Katia and Maurice's gas and mineral samples were photographed.
- d- Katia and Marcie's discoveries made the study of volcanic eruptions very difficult.

31- According to paragraph 4, how did Maurice and Katia die?

- a- They died alone while capturing the eruption of the Mount Unzen.
- b- They died trying to save the lives of 41 scientists and journalists.
- c- They died in Japan while observing the volcano Mount Unzen.
- d- They died while they were rafting into a lake of acid.

- 32- Why were most scientists afraid to observe volcano eruptions personally?
- a- Because volcanoes are unpredictable and dangerous.
 - b- Because they had special helmets to protect their heads from falling rocks.
 - c- Because they had to read many books about volcano eruptions.
 - d- Because they used to take measurements and gas readings.
- 33- According to the passage, which of the following statements is NOT TRUE?
- a- Katia was a famous French volcanologist.
 - b- Katia liked photographing erupted volcanoes.
 - c- All volcanologists could observe eruptions in person.
 - d- The Krafft Medal is given out to great volcanologists.
- 34- The author's purpose in writing this passage is to:
- a- explain to the readers the importance of volcanoes in life.
 - b- compare among dangerous volcano eruptions throughout the world.
 - c- teach readers how to avoid volcano eruptions.
 - d- inform readers about the adventures made by Katia and Maurice.

VII- Summary Making (60 Marks)

Read the following passage, then do as required:

Coffee can act as a poison when it is given in large doses to small children, but for adults who drink it in moderation, it is definitely not a poison. Most people believe that it is the caffeine which produces all the effects that coffee has on the body, but the other things the coffee bean are involved, too. The smell of the coffee itself produces stimulating effects in different parts of the body. The blood in the brain is expanded so that the circulation is improved, and this removes some of the fatigue from the brain. It can increase the pulse rate, which means stimulating the heart. Coffee also helps the body remove salts from the blood.

In a paragraph of FOUR sentences ONLY, summarise and paraphrase the passage above in answer to the following question: (4X15=60 Marks)

What happens when adults drink coffee?

VI- Reading Comprehension and Summary making (120Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

Mr. Price, the antique dealer, lived alone in a small flat above his shop. Because of the many valuable articles, he was always afraid that one night someone would break in and rob him. Years before, when he had first come to live he had shutters fitted to all the ground-floor windows and strong locks put on all the doors. He fixed a camera to monitor his room. In addition, he locked up most of his valuable articles in a cupboard, which he had specially made for this purpose. But, in spite of these measures, he never felt safe.

One Saturday night, when Mr. Price counted his money after closing the shop, he found that he had taken nearly two thousand pounds that day. This was an exceptionally large sum and the thought of keeping it in the house made him feel very nervous. He knew that it would be better to take it to his son's house where there was a small safe; but it was a foggy evening and his son lived in the other side of the town. Finally, he put it in the pocket of one of his overcoats.

Mr. Price kept awake for a long time, wondering if his money was really safe or not till he slept. Suddenly, he was woken up by the loud ringing of the shop doorbell. He sat up in bed. Could he have been dreaming? Surely, he thought no one could want to see him at this hour of the night. The doorbell rang again. He could not help thinking of a story he had read about a man who had been attacked and robbed when he went to answer the door at night. Once again, the doorbell rang more persistently this time.

Mr. Price got out of bed and went across to the window. The fog had cleared slightly. He opened the window and looked out. He could just make out the shadowy figure of a man standing on the pavement below. "What do you want?" Mr. Price called out in a nervous voice. The figure stepped back until it was standing under the street lamp. It was a policeman. "Sorry to disturb you, sir," said the policeman, "but there is light on in your shop. I think you have forgotten to turn it off."

Read the following passage, then answer the questions below:

Most people enjoy nature, and a walk in the fresh air of the countryside is often a great way to raise the spirits. In recent years, scientists have studied the link between nature and health in more detail. As a result, more and more doctors now tell their patients to take regular walks in the countryside instead of taking pills and medicines.

Taking a country walk is especially useful for people suffering from depression, obesity or people with heart conditions. Dr William Bird, who is an advisor to the organization English Nature, says that getting out and enjoying nature is a cheaper way of improving health than taking medicines. He also believes that it is often more effective. For example, patients who take anti-depressant medicines often feel depressed again when they stop taking them. But the positive effects of walking in the countryside last much longer. It is also much cheaper to take a country walk than to pay to go to a health club or gym.

A study published in the medical journal the Lancet has shown that there is a connection between good health and how near people live to a green area such as a park. The researchers found that there was a health benefit even when the green area was very small. For this reason, doctors in Britain want local councils to create more green areas so that more people will be encouraged to get outside.

Researchers at Columbia University in New York have found that when city streets are lined with trees, there are a lot of health benefits for children suffering from asthma. The researchers found that asthma rates in children aged between 4 and 5 decreased by 25% for every extra 343 trees per square kilometre. It is not clear why the rates of asthma decrease when there are more trees. It could be that the children are more likely to play outside or that the trees help reduce pollution. In any case, trees along city streets seem to be a good idea. This is why over the next few years the city of New York intends to plant another million trees.

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

In 1991 Mount Pinatubo in the Philippines surprised the world. On June 15, it erupted after standing silent for 500 years. Mt. Pinatubo is a volcano, but the people living near it never expected it to wake up. The eruption was the second most powerful eruption of the twentieth century. More than a million people had to leave their homes, and between 700 and 900 people were killed. Only a few years later, though, life was back to normal and people were once again building homes and working in the shadow of the volcano.

People might live near a volcano because it is beautiful, or because a large city already exists there. They need to move to this city to find jobs and feed their families. Some people also live near volcanoes because the land near a volcano is good for farming. Volcanoes release ash from the Earth. The ash is good for growing plants. Whatever the reason, most people who live near volcanoes probably do not realise that the volcano is dangerous.

Volcanoes and their surrounding environment are beautiful places to live, work and create. The number of people moving into volcanic hazardous areas is increasing in post-industrial as well as developing countries. Southern Italy is an example. Mt. Vesuvius is located right on the edge of Naples. It has a 2000-year history of eruptions. Yet, there are 3.75 million people living within 30 kilometers of the mountain.

One of the world's most famous volcanoes is Mt. Etna in Sicily. Sicily is an island in the Mediterranean Sea with more than 5 million inhabitants. Many of them are proud to be living near such a famous volcano. After all, countless tourists visit the area hoping to see a "safe" active volcano. Mt. Etna has been very active over recent years, with eruptions nearly every year, but the eruptions are very calm. They are beautiful to watch, and people are rarely hurt. Sicilians call Etna a "good mountain." They think of the volcano as a mother because it has given them such a good life.

Scientists say there are no "good" volcanoes. All volcanoes can be dangerous, but it is unlikely that people will stop moving to areas near volcanoes. So, if there is a mountain in your town, take a good look. Is it just a pile of rock? Or is it a sleeping dragon?

VI- Reading Comprehension (80 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions that follow:

80

It was early spring, and the weather was really nice. Jim's father told him that on Saturday they would go to the forest. Jim was excited. His mother was busy and had to stay at home to take care of his little sister, so she was not able to go with them.

The drive to the forest was only an hour, but to Jim it seemed forever. They finally arrived to the forest. Dad found a good spot close to the lake, put up the tent, set up some chairs and started a small fire. Sitting close by them was a boy about Jim's age. He came over and said his name was Barry and asked Jim if he could play with him. "Sure," said Jim. His dad began talking to Jim's dad about school, work and things dads usually talk about.

The boys explored the rabbit holes. They also enjoyed collecting some leaves for school activities. They prepared their fathers' fishing rods and they watched the forest birds which were beautiful and colourful. Finally, they decided to head for the lake. "Be careful," shouted Barry's father. "We will," Barry shouted back. The boys were having a great time. Suddenly, it became quiet and Jim couldn't find Barry. Jim looked around and finally saw him waving his hands yelling for help. Jim took action and remembered the lifesaving skills he learned during his swimming class at the local pool during the summer. Jim swam to where Barry was and put his arm around him and told him to hold on tight. Just then the forest ranger saw them. He rushed to the water and was able to bring Barry safely back out of the lake. Barry's dad was so scared, but he realised if it hadn't been for Jim's quick action, Barry may have drowned.

Barry and his dad thanked Jim for his fast thinking and great swimming skills. That night they invited Jim and his dad to have a cup of hot chocolate with them. "It's my thank you treat," said Barry's dad. Not only did the boys become friends, but their fathers did as well!

VI- Reading Comprehension (80 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

How many things can you see in the night sky? On a clear night you might see the Moon, some planets and thousands of sparkling stars. You can see even more with a telescope. You might see stars where before you only saw dark space. With bigger and bigger telescopes you can see more and more objects in the sky. And you can see those objects in more and more detail.

But scientists believe that there are some things in the sky that we will never see even with the biggest telescope in the world. That is because they are invisible and mysterious. They are dead stars which are called black holes. You might find it hard to imagine that stars die. After all, our Sun is a star. Year after year we see it up in the sky, burning brightly, giving us heat and light. The Sun certainly doesn't seem to be getting old or weak. But stars do burn out and die after billions of years.

As a star's gases burn, they give off light and heat. But when the gas runs out, the star stops burning and begins to die. As the star cools, the outer layers of the star pull in toward the center. The star squashes into a smaller and smaller ball. If the star is very small, it ends up as a cold, dark ball called a black dwarf. If the star is very big, it becomes lesser and lesser until it's packed together tighter than anything else in the universe.

Imagine if the Earth were crushed until it was the size of a tiny marble. That's how tightly this dead star, a black hole, is packed. What pulls the star in toward its center with such power? It's the same force that pulls you down when you jump - the force called gravity. A black hole is so tightly packed that its gravity sucks in everything even light. The light from a black hole can never come back to your eyes. That's why you see nothing but blackness. So the next time you stare up at the night sky, remember: there's more in the sky than meets the eye!

Harsh conditions in deserts, especially the lack of water, don't allow many living things from living in these places. However, there are some annual plants, which through their wonderful ways, have managed to survive these difficult conditions. One way is that they usually depend on their extremely short, active life cycles. In events of sudden rain, the plant seeds breed and grow very quickly to make full use of the rainwater. Then, their flowers bloom and set seeds that grow quickly in the hot sun, too. In addition, such plants usually have special means of storing water.

VI- Reading Comprehension (80 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

Katia Krafft was born in 1942 in France. She fell in love with volcanoes when she saw pictures of them. She studied geography at the University of Strasbourg, where she met her husband, Maurice Krafft. He is also a volcano fanatic,

Katia and Maurice started their own volcano center in 1968 and wrote many books that supported their trips all over the world. Katia started her career by taking gas samples of volcanoes. Maurice and Katia would document volcanoes erupting by observing them in person. Volcanoes are unpredictable and dangerous, and many scientists were too afraid to observe eruptions in person, but not Maurice and Katia. Throughout the 1970s and 1980s, they documented the volcanoes. Katia would photograph them while Maurice captured them on video. Katia wore a special helmet to protect her head from falling rocks.

Katia and Maurice's observations have led to a better understanding of volcanic eruptions. They took thickness measurements and gas readings and collected mineral samples just meters away from erupting volcanoes. They documented how these eruptions affected the ecosystems.

Together they witnessed and documented new volcanoes being formed, the effects of acid rain, and dangerous ash clouds. They even went on a small boat into a lake of acid to get proper readings. Their photography and videos allowed them to work with local governments on safety procedures. Some of their last videos were Understanding Volcanic Hazards and Reducing Volcanic Risks, but that did not mean they stopped being risk-takers. They continued to push the limits to get their observations, going closer to the volcano and staying longer during an eruption. In 1991, they were unlucky, and the volcano Mount Unzen in Japan took Katia and Maurice's lives, along with those of 41 other scientists and journalists, when the volcano flow changed direction.

Katia died doing what she loved with her husband. For years, she studied volcanoes right at their edge. Her courage and expertise have given us a greater understanding of volcanoes. The Krafft Medal is now given out to great volcanologists.

VII- Summary Making (60 Marks)

Read the following passage, then do as required:

Coffee can act as a poison when it is given in large doses to small children, but for adults who drink it in moderation, it is definitely not a poison. Most people believe that it is the caffeine which produces all the effects that coffee has on the body, but the other things in the coffee bean are involved, too. The smell of the coffee itself produces stimulating effects in different parts of the body. The blood in the brain is expanded so that the circulation is improved, and this removes some of the fatigue from the brain. It can increase the pulse rate, which means stimulating the heart. Coffee also helps the body remove salts from the blood.

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

Mr. Price, the antique dealer, lived alone in a small flat above his shop. Because of the many valuable articles, he was always afraid that one night someone would break in and rob him. Years before, when he had first come to live he had shutters fitted to all the ground-floor windows and strong locks put on all the doors. He fixed a camera to monitor his room. In addition, he locked up most of his valuable articles in a cupboard, which he had specially made for this purpose. But, in spite of these measures, he never felt safe.

One Saturday night, when Mr. Price counted his money after closing the shop, he found that he had taken nearly two thousand pounds that day. This was an exceptionally large sum and the thought of keeping it in the house made him feel very nervous. He knew that it would be better to take it to his son's house where there was a small safe, but it was a foggy evening and his son lived in the other side of the town. Finally, he put it in the pocket of one of his overcoats.

Mr. Price kept awake for a long time, wondering if his money was really safe or not till he slept. Suddenly, he was woken up by the loud ringing of the shop doorbell. He sat up in bed. Could he have been dreaming? Surely, he thought no one could want to see him at this hour of the night. The doorbell rang again. He could not help thinking of a story he had read about a man who had been attacked and robbed when he went to answer the door at night. Once again, the doorbell rang more persistently this time.

Mr. Price got out of bed and went across to the window. The fog had cleared slightly. He opened the window and looked out. He could just make out the shadowy figure of a man standing on the pavement below. "What do you want?" Mr. Price called out in a nervous voice. The figure stepped back until it was standing under the street lamp. It was a policeman. "Sorry to disturb you, sir," said the policeman, "but there is light on in your shop. I think you have forgotten to turn it off."

VI- Reading Comprehension and Summary making (120Marks)

120

Read the following passage, then answer the questions below:

Most people enjoy nature, and a walk in the fresh air of the countryside is often a great way to raise the spirits. In recent years, scientists have studied the link between nature and health in more detail. As a result, more and more doctors now tell their patients to take regular walks in the countryside instead of taking pills and medicines.

Taking a country walk is especially useful for people suffering from depression, obesity or people with heart conditions. Dr William Bird, who is an advisor to the organization English Nature, says that getting out and enjoying nature is a cheaper way of improving health than taking medicines. He also believes that it is often more effective. For example, patients who take anti-depressant medicines often feel depressed again when they stop taking them. But the positive effects of walking in the countryside last much longer. It is also much cheaper to take a country walk than to pay to go to a health club or gym.

A study published in the medical journal, the Lancet has shown that there is a connection between good health and how near people live to a green area such as a park. The researchers found that there was a health benefit even when the green area was very small. For this reason, doctors in Britain want local councils to create more green areas so that more people will be encouraged to get outside.

Researchers at Columbia University in New York have found that when city streets are lined with trees, there are a lot of health benefits for children suffering from asthma. The researchers found that asthma rates in children aged between 4 and 5 decreased by 25% for every extra 343 trees per square kilometre. It is not clear why the rates of asthma decrease when there are more trees. It could be that the children are more likely to play outside or that the trees help reduce pollution. In any case, trees along city streets seem to be a good idea. This is why over the next few years the city of New York intends to plant another million trees.

A- From a, b, c and d, choose the correct answer: (5x10= 50 Marks)

25. The best title for this passage could be
- Healthy Lifestyle
 - Green Spaces and Health
 - Air Pollution
 - Pills and Medicines

26. The underlined pronoun they in the 2nd paragraph refers to :.....

 - international
28. The main idea of the 4th paragraph is:.....
- asthma rates in children and eating healthily
 - New York City plans for the future
 - the dangers of cutting trees
 - the health benefits of growing trees
29. According to the passage, all the following statements are TRUE except:.....
- More doctors now advise patients to walk regularly instead of taking medicines.
 - Walking is useful especially for people suffering from obesity and heart diseases.
 - Getting out and enjoying nature is a very expensive way of improving health.
 - Growing trees along city streets is a good idea and helps reduce pollution.

B- With reference to the passage, answer the following questions: (3x10= 30 Marks)

30. Why do doctors in Britain recommend creating more green areas in the country?
Because studies have shown that there is a connection between good health and how near people live to a green area such as a park. /So that more people will be encouraged to get outside.
31. Which people could benefit the most from taking a country walk?
People suffering from depression, obesity or people with heart conditions.

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

In 1991 Mount Pinatubo in the Philippines surprised the world. On June 15, it erupted after standing silent for 500 years. Mt. Pinatubo is a volcano, but the people living near it never expected it to wake up. The eruption was the second most powerful eruption of the twentieth century. More than a million people had to leave their homes, and between 700 and 900 people were killed. Only a few years later, though, life was back to normal and people were once again building homes and working in the shadow of the volcano.

People might live near a volcano because it is beautiful, or because a large city already exists there. They need to move to this city to find jobs and feed their families. Some people also live near volcanoes because the land near a volcano is good for farming. Volcanoes release ash from the Earth. The ash is good for growing plants. Whatever the reason, most people who live near volcanoes probably do not realise that the volcano is dangerous.

Volcanoes and their surrounding environment are beautiful places to live, work and create. The number of people moving into volcanic hazardous areas is increasing in post-industrial as well as developing countries. Southern Italy is an example. Mt. Vesuvius is located right on the edge of Naples. It has a 2000-year history of eruptions. Yet, there are 3.75 million people living within 30 kilometers of the mountain.

One of the world's most famous volcanoes is Mt. Etna in Sicily. Sicily is an island in the Mediterranean Sea with more than 5 million inhabitants. Many of them are proud to be living near such a famous volcano. After all, countless tourists visit the area hoping to see a "safe" active volcano. Mt. Etna has been very active over recent years, with eruptions nearly every year, but the eruptions are very calm. They are beautiful to watch, and people are rarely hurt. Sicilians call Etna a "good mountain." They think of the volcano as a mother because it has given them such a good life.

Scientists say there are no "good" volcanoes. All volcanoes can be dangerous, but it is unlikely that people will stop moving to areas near volcanoes. So, if there is a mountain in your town, take a good look. Is it just a pile of rock? Or is it a sleeping dragon?
