VI- Reading Comprehension (110 Marks)

-Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

When Miguel Rodriguez was a young boy in Los Angeles, he was very shy. He had a slight speech impairment and found it difficult to communicate with others. His parents worried about how their son would get along in school. But all that changed one day in the second grade.

Miguel saw some of his classmates playing soccer and decided to join them. “It was like someone flipped a switch,” his mother said. Miguel opened up. His speech impairment disappeared, and Miguel became a successful and popular student.

Like Miguel, soccer has changed the lives of many people around the world. Whether giving a shy kid a way to open up to others, or helping homeless kids find a way to get off the streets, soccer has become an international language that speaks louder than words.

One of the reasons that soccer has been able to cross borders so easily is that the rules are the same, no matter where you are. Even if the teams come from all over the globe, they all share common rules and traditions relating to the game. After all, a yellow card means the same thing whether you are from Taiwan, the U.S., Brazil, or Italy. Some other reasons for the universal popularity of soccer may be the fact that its rules are relatively simple compared to many other sports, and because it can be played anywhere from a city park to an international stadium.

Just as Miguel Rodriguez was able to use soccer to communicate with other kids, soccer matches both big and small bring people together from all over the world. The FIFA World Cup, the largest soccer competition in the world, has seen 76 nations compete over its history. It is estimated that almost 3.2 billion people around the world watched at least one minute of the 2010 World Cup. That was approximately 46% of the whole world population which was a record no other sporting competition could even come close to. Moreover, the official attendance for the final world cup match held in 2010 at the Soccer City Stadium in Johannesburg, South Africa between Spain and the Netherlands was about 85,000 people. That was about one-ninth of the world’s entire population. With those kinds of numbers, it’s no surprise that soccer has become an international language.

A. From a, b, c and d, choose the correct answer: (5 X 10 = 50 Marks)

- FIFA: World Cup 2010

- a variety of big and small sports competitions.
 - the largest soccer competition in the world.
 - played in Spain and the Netherlands every year.
 - made up of one-ninth of the world’s entire population.
32. According to the passage, all the following statements are TRUE, EXCEPT:
- Miguel Rodriguez went to a school in Los Angeles.
 - Miguel Rodriguez became a successful and popular student.

VII- (Summary Making) (60 Marks)

Read the following passage, then do as required:

Penguins and puffins are two kinds of seabirds. They both are black and white. And they both have webbed feet. Penguins are much larger than puffins in size. Puffins have bright orange beaks and feet. However, penguins' beaks and feet are black. You won't find puffins and penguins living together. Penguins live far south, and puffins live far north. But they both depend on the sea for their food. Both birds have sharp spikes in their mouths. The spikes hold on to the fish they catch. Although penguins and puffins are birds, only puffins can fly. But, both of them use their wings to dive into the sea.

VI- Reading Comprehension (110 Marks)-Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

Robots are useful for exploring and working in space. Many robots have been sent to explore Mars. Such robots have looked like a box with wheels. Although these regular robots are useful, they are unreliable, extremely expensive, and they break easily. Because of these problems, scientists have been developing an unusual kind of robot. These new robots move like snakes, so they have been given the name "snakebots."

The way a snake is shaped helps it get into very small spaces, like cracks in rocks. It can also push its way below the ground or climb up different kinds of objects, like high rocks and trees. Such abilities account for the usefulness of a robot designed like a snake. Snakebots are much more effective than regular robots with wheels, which can easily get stuck or fall over. Since snakebots can carry tools, they would be able to work in space, as well. They could, for example, help repair the International Space Station.

But how can such a robot shape be made? A snakebot is built like a chain made of about thirty parts, or units. Each unit is basically the same in that they all have a small computer, a camera and a wheel to aid movement. The large computer in the "head" of the snake makes all of the units in a snakebot work together.

The unit design of the snakebot has many advantages. If one unit fails, another can be added easily. Since each unit is actually a robot in itself, one unit can work apart from the rest if necessary. That is, all the units can separate and move on their own, and then later, reconnect back into larger robot. Researchers are also trying to develop a snakebot made of a special kind of plastic so that it can change its shape using electricity, almost like animal muscles. Snakebots made with this plastic will be very strong and hard to break.

Overall, the snakebot design is much simpler than the common robots. Thus, snakebots will be much less expensive to build. For example, a robot sent to Mars cost over a hundred million dollars, whereas snakebots can cost a few hundred dollars. With their flexibility and affordability, snakebots seem to be the wave of the future, at least as far as space robots are concerned.

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

After returning to Europe, a Swiss scientist was reported to be suffering from Ebola disease. This was the first case reported in 15 years. Further investigations revealed that the scientist might have been exposed to the virus while studying unexplained deaths among the chimpanzees in the west coast of Africa in November 1994. In April 1995, a medical worker died in a hospital and so did his doctor. The nurse who cared for them died too. Now, the population of Kikwit, a town in Zaire, Africa, is threatened with the killer disease - the Ebola virus.

The Ebola virus and its related strains were first seen in 1976 in Sudan. In that year, 280 people died in a village near the Ebola River from which the virus got its name. The Ebola virus is one of the most mysterious and deadliest killers. It kills 90 per cent of the victims who are infected. It is spread through direct contact with infected blood and other body fluids. Symptoms of the disease are fever, headache, violent diarrheas, vomiting and weakness. Death finally occurs in the second week when blood pours out from the eyes, ears and nose.

There is still no vaccine for the virus but the symptoms can be kept under control. People can avoid catching the disease by not travelling to areas where the virus is found. Health care workers can prevent infection by wearing masks, gloves, and goggles whenever they come into contact with people who may have Ebola. The government in Zaire put spot checks and road blocks to stop the spread of the virus. Air and sea ports around the world like the US, Thailand, Turkey, Taiwan, Egypt, United Arab Emirates and Yemen have also taken steps to reduce the spread of the Ebola virus. The bodies of people who have died of Ebola are still contagious. Specially organized and trained teams should bury the remains, using appropriate safety equipment. People who suspect that they have been exposed to Ebola virus are likely to seek immediate medical attention and should be taken care of immediately if they develop any symptoms in order to prevent any further spread of the disease.

Fortunately, the Ebola virus is now stable with no new cases reported. According to the World Health Organization (WHO), the deadly Ebola virus does not pose a serious international risk.

Either indirectly or directly, plants are essential for life. Throughout the history of human beings, about seven thousand various species of plants are being used as food for both humans and animals and this is just one reason why plants are important. VI- Reading Comprehension (110 marks)

- Read the following passage and answer the questions below:

11

Some teachers started new schools in the United States because they want their children to learn from life. Children in the United States like to ask questions at home, at school and every place they go to. This is because they want to know why and how things happen.

Children in the US often ask why they have to do things the way they are taught. Grown-ups ask them questions all the time, so discussion is important. American teachers feel their children are learning when they talk and write about things they study.

In many American Indian cultures, learning is a quieter thing. At home, children often learn that it is bad manners to ask questions to grown-ups, or to look at them in the face, instead of looking down. Therefore, at schools, many Indians do not ask questions or give answers on their own.

There is an Indian story about an animal who asks an oil tree too many questions. The tree cannot see as well as the animal but he keeps asking about the things around him. Then he tries to cross a river. Every time he moves, he asks the tree how deep the river is. At last, he falls under the water. The animal asks no more questions, and the tree can rest again. With all his questions, the animal never learned what he needed to know.

The Indian parents also have a different style of teaching. Indian parents who want their children to be good weavers give them lots of time to weave so they can learn to do it well. If the girl can't do the weaving in a good way, her parents punish her because they think that weaving is a way of life for them. Parents send their daughters to some local schools to learn weaving. When they weave successfully, they are rewarded by the parents.

For all these differences, however, parents still want many of the same things for their children. They want them to know how to be part of their family and their culture. They want them to know how to work. Children, in school or out, have the same rights all over the world, to learn, grow up, and pass their culture on.

VII - SUMMARY MAKING (60 Marks)

- Read the following passage, then do as required:

Over a hundred years, people are still terrified of flying. That is because of the airplane accidents.

Some studies show that there are some reasons such as pilot errors. As a seven-year study was conducted and found that over half of all airplane accidents are due to human errors. Another reason is poor airplane maintenance. It's an unfortunate truth that maintenance problems have contributed to 42% of fatal airline accidents in the United States. Maintenance related issues occur when there is a systematic breakdown.

Furthermore, about 10% of airplane crashes are caused by acts of damage including situations where hijackers take control of the plane or where the pilots themselves decide to intentionally crash. We shouldn't also forget that bad weather conditions including thunderstorms, lack of visibility, and strong wind may lead to catastrophic consequences.

VI- READING COMPREHENSION (110 Marks)

- Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

110

"Koko" was a female gorilla. She was known for having learned a large number of hand signs from American Sign Language. Koko was able to understand more than 1,000 signs of what Patterson, her instructor and trainer, calls "Gorilla Sign Language". Koko was born at the San Francisco Zoo and lived most of her life in California. Koko gained public attention in the broadcast media because she adopted a kitten as a pet. Koko was also known for meeting many celebrities.

In contrast to other experiments attempting to teach sign language to non-humans, Patterson at the same time, exposed Koko to spoken English from an early age. Patterson reported that Koko understood approximately 2,000 words of spoken English, in addition to the signs. It is generally accepted that she did not use grammar, and that her use of language did not exceed that of a young human child.

A researcher said that Koko asked for a cat in 1983. Ron Cohn, a biologist, explained that when she was given a lifelike stuffed animal, she was less than satisfied. She did not play with it and continued to sign "sad". So on her birthday in July 1984, she was able to choose a kitten. Koko selected a gray male and named him "All Ball". Koko cared for the kitten as if it was a baby gorilla. They said that she tried to nurse "All Ball" and was very gentle and loving.

In December 1984, "All Ball" escaped from Koko's cage and was hit and killed by a car. Later, Patterson said that when she signed to Koko that "All Ball" had been killed, Koko signed "Bad, sad, bad, cry, frown, sad". Patterson also reported later hearing Koko making a sound similar to human weeping.

Koko died in her sleep during the morning of June 19, 2018, at the Gorilla Foundation's preserve in Woodside, California, at the age of 46. The Gorilla Foundation released a statement that "Her impact has been very deep and what she has taught us about the emotions of gorillas and their mental abilities will continue to shape the world."

Since then, our understanding of animal intelligence and emotional capabilities has grown. Koko was a huge part of this change in viewpoint. Since "Project Koko" began in 1972, she challenged our ideas on what animals are capable of.

A- From a, b, c and d choose the correct answer: (5x10=50)

VII - SUMMARY MAKING (60 Marks)

- Read the following passage carefully, then do as required:

Writing a successful book doesn't come easily , it always starts with an idea. So, before you start writing, you need to determine how good this idea is and if it can sell. Once you've decided you're ready to write a book, you need next to organise your time. It is important to make sure that you follow a timetable to finish writing your book.

Then, once the book is written, you'll need to spend time marketing it. This means blogging about it, speaking about it, doing social media campaigns putting your time and energy behind it. Then you need to find a publisher, or you could self-publish your book. By self-publishing, you get to control all aspects of your book. Finally, have a fantastic cover, without a professional cover, your book will stand little or no chance.

VI- Reading Comprehension and Summary Making (150 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

Green tea is more than just green liquid. It is the healthiest beverage on earth. It is loaded with antioxidants and nutrients that have powerful effects on the body. This includes improved brain function, fat loss, a lower risk of cancer and many other incredible benefits. Green tea, however, has its risks, but its benefits are still more than any risk.

Compounds in green tea can improve brain function and make you smarter. The key active ingredient is caffeine. The caffeine amount in green tea, which is not as much as in coffee, is enough to produce a response without causing the nervous effects associated with too much caffeine. Caffeine consistently leads to improvements in various aspects of brain function, including improved mood, vigilance, reaction time and memory. Because of the smaller dose of caffeine, green tea can give you a much milder and different kind of “excitement” than coffee. Many people report having more stable energy and being much more productive when they drink green tea, compared to coffee.

Green tea increases fat burning and improves physical performance. If you look at the ingredients list for any fat burning drink, green tea will have good chances to be there. In a study on ten healthy men, green tea increased energy spending by 4%, which led to an increase in the burning of fat. Caffeine, itself, has been shown to improve physical performance by preparing fatty acids to be used as energy.

Antioxidants in green tea may lower your risk of various types of cancer. Cancer is uncontrolled growth of cells. Green tea is an excellent source of powerful antioxidants, which can have a preventive effect and may stop the development of cancer. Multiple observational studies show that green tea drinkers are significantly less likely to get various types of cancer. It is important to keep in mind that it may be a bad idea to put milk in your tea, because it can reduce the antioxidant value.

Green tea may have its risks. In some people, it can cause stomach upset. It has also been reported to cause liver problems in rare cases. Green tea is possibly unsafe when taken in high doses (more than 4 cups a day). It can cause side effects because of the caffeine. These side effects include headache, nervousness, sleep problems, irregular heart beat and dizziness. It also seems to decrease the amount of calcium in the body.

A) From a, b, c and d, choose the correct answer: (5X10=50)

26. The best title for the passage could be:
- a- Green Tea- Origin and History
 - b- Green Tea- Cooking and Flavour

- a- Green tea as a disease fighter
 - b- Green tea as a fat-burning drink

- a- patriotic
 - b- productive
 - c- protective
 - d- previous
29. The underlined word it in the 4th paragraph refers to:
- a- green tea
 - b- bad idea
 - c- milk
 - d- risk
30. According to the text, which of the following statements is NOT TRUE?
- a- The antioxidants in green tea have a powerful impact on the body.

VI- Reading Comprehension (150 Marks)

Read the following passage, then answer the questions:

In January 2012, student Taylor Sauer was driving home at 160 kph when she rammed into a slow-moving truck. Investigators discovered that Sauer had been using her phone to send and receive text messages and access Facebook. The growing rates of accidents involving teenagers have been a major concern in the USA, which seeks to limit this fatal phenomenon by all means.

There are different opinions and feelings regarding teen drivers. For the teen driver, there are feelings of excitement, independence and, perhaps, responsibility. For the parents of the teenage driver, there are feelings of worry, responsibility and, for many parents, terror.

According to car crash statistics, teenagers aged 16 to 19 have the highest annual accident rates and traffic violations of any other age group. Traffic accidents are the main cause of death among teenagers in the USA. Adult drivers are often alarmed by the careless driving of young novice drivers who are more likely to engage in risky behaviours like speeding, running red lights, violating traffic signs and signals, making illegal turns, overtaking dangerously, and failure to stop to pedestrians.

There are many reasons why teen drivers are more likely to be involved in traffic accidents. Distractions such as the use of cell phones and loud music from radios, CDs and MP3 players require a teenage driver to take their eyes off the road and focus their attention on the device itself. The desire to show off is another important factor. As soon as teenagers get their license, they want to share their driving experiences with friends. Most friends may actually encourage the driver to drive recklessly or make poor driving decisions. Many teenagers feel overconfident and do not take driving risks seriously enough. "That will never happen to me," is a common thought among teens. This thought causes teenage drivers to take more risks. Moreover, most teenage drivers have not yet completely learnt basic safe-driving knowledge and skills they need to drive safely. This lack of experience proves deadly on the road.

Car accidents caused by teenagers have become the leading cause of teen deaths for several years. Fighting this problem is a shared responsibility involving parents, teenagers themselves and the society as a whole. It has become more important now for everyone of us to take an active role in preventing such accidents.

VI- Reading Comprehension (110 Marks)-Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

When Miguel Rodriguez was a young boy in Los Angeles, he was very shy. He had a slight speech impairment and found it difficult to communicate with others. His parents worried about how their son would get along in school. But all that changed one day in the second grade.

Miguel saw some of his classmates playing soccer and decided to join them. “It was like someone flipped a switch,” his mother said. Miguel opened up. His speech impairment disappeared, and Miguel became a successful and popular student.

Like Miguel, soccer has changed the lives of many people around the world. Whether giving a shy kid a way to open up to others, or helping homeless kids find a way to get off the streets, soccer has become an international language that speaks louder than words.

One of the reasons that soccer has been able to cross borders so easily is that the rules are the same, no matter where you are. Even if the teams come from all over the globe, they all share common rules and traditions relating to the game. After all, a yellow card means the same thing whether you are from Taiwan, the U.S., Brazil, or Italy. Some other reasons for the universal popularity of soccer may be the fact that its rules are relatively simple compared to many other sports, and because it can be played anywhere from a city park to an international stadium.

Just as Miguel Rodriguez was able to use soccer to communicate with other kids, soccer matches both big and small bring people together from all over the world. The FIFA World Cup, the largest soccer competition in the world, has seen 76 nations compete over its history. It is estimated that almost 3.2 billion people around the world watched at least one minute of the 2010 World Cup. That was approximately 46% of the whole world population which was a record no other sporting competition could even come close to. Moreover, the official attendance for the final world cup match held in 2010 at the Soccer City Stadium in Johannesburg, South Africa between Spain and the Netherlands was about 85.000 people. That was about one-ninth of the world’s entire population. With those kinds of numbers, it’s no surprise that soccer has become an international language.

VI- Reading Comprehension (110 Marks)

-Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

Robots are useful for exploring and working in space. Many robots have been sent to explore Mars. Such robots have looked like a box with wheels. Although these regular robots are useful, they are unreliable, extremely expensive, and they break easily. Because of these problems, scientists have been developing an unusual kind of robot. These new robots move like snakes, so they have been given the name "snakebots."

The way a snake is shaped helps it get into very small spaces, like cracks in rocks. It can also push its way below the ground or climb up different kinds of objects, like high rocks and trees. Such abilities account for the usefulness of a robot designed like a snake. Snakebots are much more effective than regular robots with wheels, which can easily get stuck or fall over. Since snakebots can carry tools, they would be able to work in space, as well. They could, for example, help repair the International Space Station.

But how can such a robot shape be made? A snakebot is built like a chain made of about thirty parts, or units. Each unit is basically the same in that they all have a small computer, a camera and a wheel to aid movement. The large computer in the "head" of the snake makes all of the units in a snakebot work together.

The unit design of the snakebot has many advantages. If one unit fails, another can be added easily. Since each unit is actually a robot in itself, one unit can work apart from the rest if necessary. That is, all the units can separate and move on their own, and then later, reconnect back into larger robot. Researchers are also trying to develop a snakebot made of a special kind of plastic so that it can change its shape using electricity, almost like animal muscles. Snakebots made with this plastic will be very strong and hard to break.

Overall, the snakebot design is much simpler than the common robots. Thus, snakebots will be much less expensive to build. For example, a robot sent to Mars cost over a hundred million dollars, whereas snakebots can cost a few hundred dollars. With their flexibility and affordability, snakebots seem to be the wave of the future, at least as far as space robots are concerned.

VI- Reading Comprehension (110 marks)

- Read the following passage and answer the questions below:

11

Some teachers started new schools in the United States because they want their children to learn from life. Children in the United States like to ask questions at home, at school and every place they go to. This is because they want to know why and how things happen.

Children in the US often ask why they have to do things the way they are taught. Grown-ups ask them questions all the time, so discussion is important. American teachers feel their children are learning when they talk and write about things they study.

In many American Indian cultures, learning is a quieter thing. At home, children often learn that it is bad manners to ask questions to grown-ups, or to look at them in the face, instead of looking down. Therefore, at schools, many Indians do not ask questions or give answers on their own.

There is an Indian story about an animal who asks an oil tree too many questions. The tree cannot see as well as the animal but he keeps asking about the things around him. Then he tries to cross a river. Every time he moves, he asks the tree how deep the river is. At last, he falls under the water. The animal asks no more questions, and the tree can rest again. With all his questions, the animal never learned what he needed to know.

The Indian parents also have a different style of teaching. Indian parents who want their children to be good weavers give them lots of time to weave so they can learn to do it well. If the girl can't do the weaving in a good way, her parents punish her because they think that weaving is a way of life for them. Parents send their daughters to some local schools to learn weaving. When they weave successfully, they are rewarded by the parents.

For all these differences, however, parents still want many of the same things for their children. They want them to know how to be part of their family and their culture. They want them to know how to work. Children, in school or out, have the same rights all over the world, to learn, grow up, and pass their culture on.

A- From a, b, c and d choose the correct answer: (5x10=50 m)

- a) learning at home
- b) children learning at schools

- a) notify
- b) reward

60

- Read the following passage, then do as required:

Over a hundred years, people are still terrified of flying. That is because of the airplane accidents.

Some studies show that there are some reasons such as pilot errors. As a seven-year study was conducted and found that over half of all airplane accidents are due to human errors. Another reason is poor airplane maintenance. It's an unfortunate truth that maintenance problems have contributed to 42% of fatal airline accidents in the United States. Maintenance related issues occur when there is a systematic breakdown.

Furthermore, about 10% of airplane crashes are caused by acts of damage including situations where hijackers take control of the plane or where the pilots themselves decide to intentionally crash. We shouldn't also forget that bad weather conditions including thunderstorms, lack of visibility, and strong wind may lead to catastrophic consequences.

VI- READING COMPREHENSION (110 Marks.)

- Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

"Koko" was a female gorilla. She was known for having learned a large number of hand signs from American Sign Language. Koko was able to understand more than 1,000 signs of what Patterson, her instructor and trainer, calls "Gorilla Sign Language". Koko was born at the San Francisco Zoo and lived most of her life in California. Koko gained public attention in the broadcast media because she adopted a kitten as a pet. Koko was also known for meeting many celebrities.

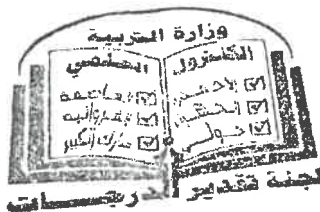

In contrast to other experiments attempting to teach sign language to non-humans, Patterson at the same time, exposed Koko to spoken English from an early age. Patterson reported that Koko understood approximately 2,000 words of spoken English, in addition to the signs. It is generally accepted that she did not use grammar, and that her use of language did not exceed that of a young human child.

A researcher said that Koko asked for a cat in 1983. Ron Cohn, a biologist, explained that when she was given a lifelike stuffed animal, she was less than satisfied. She did not play with it and continued to sign "sad". So on her birthday in July 1984, she was able to choose a kitten. Koko selected a gray male and named him "All Ball". Koko cared for the kitten as if it was a baby gorilla. They said that she tried to nurse "All Ball" and was very gentle and loving.

In December 1984, "All Ball" escaped from Koko's cage and was hit and killed by a car. Later, Patterson said that when she signed to Koko that "All Ball" had been killed, Koko signed "Bad, sad, bad, cry, frown, sad". Patterson also reported later hearing Koko making a sound similar to human weeping.

Koko died in her sleep during the morning of June 19, 2018, at the Gorilla Foundation's preserve in Woodside, California, at the age of 46. The Gorilla Foundation released a statement that "Her impact has been very deep and what she has taught us about the emotions of gorillas and their mental abilities will continue to shape the world."

Since then, our understanding of animal intelligence and emotional capabilities has grown. Koko was a huge part of this change in viewpoint. Since "Project Koko" began in 1972, she challenged our ideas on what animals are capable of.

VII - SUMMARY MAKING (60 Marks)

- Read the following passage carefully, then do as required:

Writing a successful book doesn't come easily , it always starts with an idea. So, before you start writing, you need to determine how good this idea is and if it can sell. Once you've decided you're ready to write a book, you need next to organise your time. It is important to make sure that you follow a timetable to finish writing your book.

Then, once the book is written, you'll need to spend time marketing it. This means blogging about it, speaking about it, doing social media campaigns putting your time and energy behind it. Then you need to find a publisher, or you could self-publish your book. By self-publishing, you get to control all aspects of your book. Finally, have a fantastic cover, without a professional cover, your book will stand little or no chance.

VI- Reading Comprehension and Summary Making (150 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

Green tea is more than just green liquid. It is the healthiest beverage on earth. It is loaded with antioxidants and nutrients that have powerful effects on the body. This includes improved brain function, fat loss, a lower risk of cancer and many other incredible benefits. Green tea, however, has its risks, but its benefits are still more than any risk.

Compounds in green tea can improve brain function and make you smarter. The key active ingredient is caffeine. The caffeine amount in green tea, which is not as much as in coffee, is enough to produce a response without causing the nervous effects associated with too much caffeine. Caffeine consistently leads to improvements in various aspects of brain function, including improved mood, vigilance, reaction time and memory. Because of the smaller dose of caffeine, green tea can give you a much milder and different kind of "excitement" than coffee. Many people report having more stable energy and being much more productive when they drink green tea, compared to coffee.

Green tea increases fat burning and improves physical performance. If you look at the ingredients list for any fat burning drink, green tea will have good chances to be there. In a study on ten healthy men, green tea increased energy spending by 4%, which led to an increase in the burning of fat. Caffeine, itself, has been shown to improve physical performance by preparing fatty acids to be used as energy.

Antioxidants in green tea may lower your risk of various types of cancer. Cancer is uncontrolled growth of cells. Green tea is an excellent source of powerful antioxidants, which can have a preventive effect and may stop the development of cancer. Multiple observational studies show that green tea drinkers are significantly less likely to get various types of cancer. It is important to keep in mind that it may be a bad idea to put milk in your tea, because it can reduce the antioxidant value.

Green tea may have its risks. In some people, it can cause stomach upset. It has also been reported to cause liver problems in rare cases. Green tea is possibly unsafe when taken in high doses (more than 4 cups a day). It can cause side effects because of the caffeine. These side effects include headache, nervousness, sleep problems, irregular heart beat and dizziness. It also seems to decrease the amount of calcium in the body.

VI- Reading Comprehension (150 Marks)

150

Read the following passage, then answer the questions:

In January 2012, student Taylor Sauer was driving home at 160 kph when she rammed into a slow-moving truck. Investigators discovered that Sauer had been using her phone to send and receive text messages and access Facebook. The growing rates of accidents involving teenagers have been a major concern in the USA, which seeks to limit this fatal phenomenon by all means.

There are different opinions and feelings regarding teen drivers. For the teen driver, there are feelings of excitement, independence and, perhaps, responsibility. For the parents of the teenage driver, there are feelings of worry, responsibility and, for many parents, terror.

According to car crash statistics, teenagers aged 16 to 19 have the highest annual accident rates and traffic violations of any other age group. Traffic accidents are the main cause of death among teenagers in the USA. Adult drivers are often alarmed by the careless driving of young novice drivers who are more likely to engage in risky behaviours like speeding, running red lights, violating traffic signs and signals, making illegal turns, overtaking dangerously, and failure to stop to pedestrians.

There are many reasons why teen drivers are more likely to be involved in traffic accidents. Distractions such as the use of cell phones and loud music from radios, CDs and MP3 players require a teenage driver to take their eyes off the road and focus their attention on the device itself. The desire to show off is another important factor. As soon as teenagers get their license, they want to share their driving experiences with friends. Most friends may actually encourage the driver to drive recklessly or make poor driving decisions. Many teenagers feel overconfident and do not take driving risks seriously enough. "That will never happen to me," is a common thought among teens. This thought causes teenage drivers to take more risks. Moreover, most teenage drivers have not yet completely learnt basic safe-driving knowledge and skills they need to drive safely. This lack of experience proves deadly on the road.

Car accidents caused by teenagers have become the leading cause of teen deaths for several years. Fighting this problem is a shared responsibility involving parents, teenagers themselves and the society as a whole. It has become more important now for everyone of us to take an active role in preventing such accidents.
