-Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions that follow:

Floods are one of the most common natural disasters, second only to wildfires in rainforests. They occur almost everywhere in the world, causing damage and even death. Scientists have worked hard to predict floods, but the best they can do is recognise the conditions that might cause flooding. Several factors, such as deep snow and human mistakes, can lead to floods.

When deep snow melts, it turns into a large amount of water. Deep snow by itself does not usually cause floods, but when combined with heavy rain and warmer weather, it can. If the snow melts quickly on frozen or very wet ground, it is more likely to cause flooding. Frozen ground or ground that is already full of water cannot soak up the extra water from melting snow. The melting snow also increases the water level in rivers and streams. When rivers are already full, heavy rain can make them overflow and flood the surrounding land.

Rivers that are covered in ice can also lead to floods. When the ice melts, it cracks into big pieces. These pieces float down the river and can form a dam. The water behind the dam rises and floods the land upstream. If the dam breaks suddenly, the water behind it can flood the areas downstream as well.

When dam water is released, it can travel long distances, covering the ground with mud and waste. It can destroy everything in its path. Although scientists cannot always predict exactly when floods will happen, they know the conditions that make flooding likely. Conditions like deep snow, ice-covered rivers, and weak dams all make floods more likely.

Understanding why floods happen helps scientists predict them more accurately. Although predicting floods is still a challenge, knowing the conditions that cause floods can help us reduce the damage they cause. Hopefully, this knowledge of why floods happen can help us reduce the damage they cause.

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions that follow:

Dreams are fascinating. You can have nice ones, realistic ones or those that are scary, strange or imaginary. They occur as you sleep and generally become more vivid as the sleep stage progresses. Sometimes you can't remember a dream; others may be unclear while there are some that can be closely recalled because they are so intense. These are what we call Vivid Dreams.

So, have you experienced any vivid dreams? Social media and online forums are crammed with stories of vivid dreams. Experts are claiming that there is a lot of truth in this phenomenon. People are sleeping longer and this allows more time for dreaming. In addition, the more boring your life is, the more your night time brain activity tries to recompense and the more exciting your dreams become.

However, what do those dreams mean? Experts decline and refuse that dreams can predict events, but they can help us understand our feelings. The events in dreams are symbolic. For example, missing that train might indicate that you are feeling left behind, or simply that you are nervous. Walking on air shows your feeling of being impossible to be defeated. If you dream that your teeth are falling out, you have bitten off more than you can chew. Slow down and do less! Dreaming of natural disasters – earthquakes, tsunamis and volcanic eruptions can be intense and terrifying. They show that you are feeling frightened by events out of your control.

It is worthwhile to try and discover the meaning of your dreams, as this can help you understand your feelings. One way to do this is by association. If you dream about people, ask: what does this person mean to me? If you dream about birds, for example, think: do you love them or do they make you nervous? Some people claim they never dream; well, they do, but they just forget.

You may try to recall your dreams, but they will not tell you anything important as experts approved.

The tiger is the largest of all the cats. This wild mammal is found in some remote forests and rainforests in East Asia. At present, the tiger is an endangered species in the wild. There are many things we might do to save this animal. Tigers would survive if we stopped cutting the rainforests where they live. Creating natural reserves for this rare animal is another step that can help. Also, if biologists took care of the existing tigers, they would protect them. Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

When the Great War of 1914-1918 broke out, Fleming became an army doctor and carried on his work in France. When a soldier was wounded in battle, a piece of his dirty clothing was often carried deep into the wound by the bullet. The wound would become bad or septic, causing disease to spread through the body. Sometimes, an arm or a leg has to be cut off, or the soldier would die, not from the wound itself, but from the infection poisoning in his body. This happened to thousands of soldiers during the Great War.

Fleming knew that microbes, which increased very quickly, caused a disease of this kind. It was believed that washing the wound with an acid called antiseptic might kill them. However, despite immediate antiseptic treatment, soldiers continued to die in large numbers. After the war, Fleming went on working for years, trying to find an antiseptic which would stop microbes from growing but would not harm the blood cells so that the body could carry on its own fight against the disease naturally.

One day he stopped to examine the glass dishes on which he had grown some microbes in a special liquid. In one dish, he was surprised to notice a greenish mould. That meant a tiny seed, too small to see, must have floated on the dish when the lid was off. Fleming took a closer look and then made a careful examination. And believe it or not, a strange thing happened: in the area where the greenish mould was growing, the disease microbes disappeared! Fleming began to grow enough of the mould to make from it a clear liquid, which tests showed could kill microbes or stop them in both animals and humans without harming their white blood cells. He called the liquid penicillin.

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

If you have been reading fairy stories, you may believe that all wolves are harmful, and evil. They eat children, sheep and other small animals. They are aggressive and won't stop until they get what they want. There really isn't anything good to say about wolves. Or is there? Are wolves just misunderstood?

Wolves are actually nothing like the characters described in fairy stories. While it is true that their diet consists of deer, rabbits, and other small animals, wolves would never attack a child just for the sake of eating. Wolves have been known to attack people when they threaten them. This happens only rarely. Wolves are usually pretty shy animals. They stay within their own land and protect their own pack (group).

Wolves are meat eaters, and they must hunt to get their food. They are strong and fast and have sharp teeth. They use their sense of smell to find prey. Wolves hunt in packs and chase their prey until it gets tired. They usually hunt the weakest, slowest animal in a group. Wolves are not cruel; they are just good hunters.

Some wolves, such as the red wolf, are near extinction. Their homes are steadily disappearing as people spread their own homes further into the wilderness. Wolves have also been hunted extensively. Ranchers and farmers pose another threat to wolves. They become angry when wolves come onto their property and eat their chickens and sheep. This is a serious problem, because the farmers lose their animals, and the wolves get shot by the angry farmers. No one wins in this battle.

Wolves are an important part of the balance of nature. They hunt weak animals and help control the population of certain animals, such as deer. In many countries, it is now against the law to hunt wolves. Many zoos and scientists are working hard to protect wolves because they understand just how important and misunderstood they are.

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions that follow:

Before mobile phones and computers, written letters were one of the most basic forms of communication to convey thoughts and ideas, to answer queries and everything else that needs to be expressed. The method of sending letters has improved a lot over the years. Around the fourth millennium, cuneiform script was written on stone or clay tablets with a reed. For over 35 centuries, this method of writing and communicating was applied. This was replaced during the Roman Era with alphabetic writing.

Pigeon post is the use of homing pigeons as messengers. Pigeons have an excellent sense of direction and can easily find their way back home. After composing the message on small scraps of paper, it is tied to the bird's leg. To this day, pigeon post remains useful in the most remote areas where electricity and Internet are unavailable. This method was also used in the military and navy to convey news and orders from one post to another. A far older method than using homing pigeons was the use of smoke signals.

Nowadays, there are a lot of procedures for sending a letter or a package to any part of the world. Among the popular options is the postal service like FedEx. Shipping fees vary depending on the size, weight, the contents of your letter or package and its destination. You must also consider when you want the package to arrive: overnight shipping (delivered by the next day) or next-flight-out shipping (where your package is shipped as soon as a flight is available). If not urgent, there is also shipping that takes one to five days.

If you need to send a letter faster, the Internet is always available and offers various options. Email is one of the most common methods. Through an email service, you do not have to write down on paper, use a stamp or spend money. Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions that follow:

Winter is cold in some places. Many plants do not grow during winter. Some plants die. Snow and ice may cover the ground. It can be hard for animals to find food during winter. Some animals get through this time in many ways.

Birds and butterflies can fly. Many of them do not stick around for the winter. They leave. They go to a place with nice and warmer weather. Then they come home in the springtime. We call this migration. Migration means the movement from one place to another for different reasons. Migrating is a good way to avoid the cold which reaches about -40 in some areas.

Another good way to avoid the cold is to sleep through it. Many animals hide during the winter. Their bodies slow down. They save their energy. They do not eat. They live off of their fat. They do this until food returns. We call this hibernation. Snakes, frogs, and bears hibernate. Some animals store food in their homes. They do not sleep all winter, but they do much less. They live on what they saved in the summer and fall. This is what squirrels, beavers, and raccoons do. Skunks do this too.

Other animals tough it out. They do not leave. They do not hide. They must survive. Sometimes nature helps them out. Some animals grow thicker coats in the winter. Other animals change their colour. For example, the arctic fox is brown in the summer. Its coat turns white in the winter.

Winter may be pretty. It is nice to see snow on the trees. But it is hazardous too. People are also at risk and danger. You can get frost bitten or worse. How do you beat the winter? Do you wear a thick coat? Do you stay inside? Or do you live somewhere warm?

VI- READING COMPREHENSION: (80 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions that follow:

People think children should play sports. Sports are fun, and children stay healthy while playing with others. However, playing sports can have negative effects on children. It may produce feelings of poor self-confidence or aggressive behaviour in some children.

According to research on children and sports, 40 million children play sports in the US. Of these, 18 million say they have been yelled at or called names while playing sports. This leaves many children with a bad impression of sports. They think sports are just too aggressive. Many researchers believe adults, especially parents and coaches, are the main cause of too much aggression in children's sports. They believe children copy aggressive adult behaviour. This behaviour is then further reinforced through both positive and negative feedback.

Parents and coaches are powerful teachers because children usually look up to them. Often these adults behave aggressively themselves, sending children the message that winning is everything. At children's sporting events, parents may yell insults at other players or cheer when their child behaves aggressively. As well, children may be taught that hurting other players is acceptable, or they may be pushed to continue playing even when they are injured.

In addition, the media makes violence seem exciting. Children watch adult sports games and see violent behaviour replayed over and over on television. As a society, we really need to face up to this problem and do something about it. Parents and coaches should act as better examples for children. They also need to teach children better values. They should teach children to enjoy themselves whether they win or not. It is not necessary to knock yourself out to enjoy sports. Winning is not everything. In addition, children should not be allowed to continue to play when they are injured. Sending a child with an injury into a game gives the child the message that health is not as important as winning. If we make some basic changes, children might learn to enjoy sports again.
